

P280

Cyprus peacekeeping photo collection. – 1968-1991. – ca. 200 photographs.

The collection consists of photos of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry (PPCLI) activities in Cyprus. The peacekeeping operation there was one of Canada's longest overseas military commitments. A large Canadian contingent served on the island from 1964 to 1993. Around the time the island became independent, friction between the Greek and Turkish ethnic groups in Cyprus grew, leading to violence across the island in 1963. Because of this unrest the United Nations Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP) was established in 1964. The fragile balance reached was upset in 1974 with a coup d'etat by Greek Cypriots who wanted the island to become a part of Greece. In turn, Turkey invaded the island and took control of the northern part of Cyprus. Canadian and other UN peacekeepers suddenly found themselves in the middle of a war zone where there was little stability and much violence. After several weeks of active fighting, a cease-fire was negotiated. The UN established the famous "Green Line," a cease-fire line and buffer zone stretching across Cyprus, separating the portions of the island controlled by the Greeks and the Turks. From 1968, when the first PPCLI unit served, Patricia battalions rotated for six-month tours of duty with other Canadian Army units until 1993 when the last Canadian unit left Cyprus. In total, battalions of the Regiment served thirteen tours or a sum of six and a half years on the Mediterranean island.

Reproduction or publication of the images requires permission of PPCLI Regimental Museum and Archives.

Portraits of individual members of PPCLI are located in P400.

Additions to the collection are expected.
